Title
Uncle Rheem

Genre
Horror, thriller, and crime

Written by Olmec Entertainment
olmecopportunities@gmail.com

WGA West
Registration Number: 1984353

Similar to Godfather, Scarface, on steroids

Logline

A mentally exhausted FBI agent plays a vicious cat and mouse game with a sociopathic moral degenerate head of a very secret and very powerful black multinational crime family.

The main characters:
The FBI agent, “Robert”, is a Robert De Niro type character.
The black underworld figure, Samuel “Uncle” Rheem, is a Samuel l Jackson type character.
Queen Mother is an Oprah Winfrey type character

At the beginning, decades ago (can be flashbacks or in chronological order):

The FBI agent is a by the book type individual with a beautiful wife and three small children. He lives in a middle-class area and attends the local church. He appears to be everything that the FBI embodies.

Everyone at the FBI field office speaks highly of Robert’s competence and dedication. He is the first one to the office and the last one to leave. Major criminals even give him extra respect for his professionalism.

Today was a unique day new assignments were being given out. Robert received his assignments and to his nature, he asked for extra work. The head FBI agent asks Robert if he was sure he wanted this file. Yes, sir echoed Robert. This extra file would change his life and his family's lives forever.

For some odd reason, he decided to read the last file first. The file contained pictures and notes about a criminal name Samuel Rheem, AKA Uncle Rheem. After reading the file he realized he was engaging with a true psychopath criminal mastermind with no apparent morals.

Who was this Samuel? He was in his 40s and had a family. He had been suspected of numerous murders, rapes, robberies, human trafficking, narcotics, and gambling. He had never been arrested. All witnesses seem to either vanish or be murdered in the most ghastly manner. He seemed to be connected. He had a tight group of family members and others that feared him and revered him. Samuel Rheem thought nothing of burning a person alive while he enjoyed a glass of wine. He was the exact opposite of Robert.

Robert was rising in the FBI and Sam was rising in the underworld. He consolidated his grip on the drug trade in America by buying directly from the Colombians. The cartels were mainly his shippers. He eliminated mafia, local law enforcement, and rivals with brutal military precision but out of public view.

Around the world, he did the dirty work for governments that they could not do it with their own employe. Uncle Rheem's organization did the immoral work that no one else could do and survive. From the very beginning, the relationship between Robert and Samuel was destined to be a cruel twist of fate. It would be bizarre, violent and obsessive.

Robert always wondered where Sam got all that money to finance his operations worldwide. Who was protecting him and why? Was there a larger Family behind him?

Robert was successful in getting the FBI to create a task force comprised of all the government agencies to go after Sam's worldwide criminal organization. Samuel always seems to be one step ahead but this time Robert felt certain that he was going to arrest him.

One day he left the office late as usual eager to see his family but very tired. He walked into his house only to see his wife and children dead. The scene was reminiscent of an animal attack.

Years went by but they could never prove that Samuel was responsible for the murders. Robert started drinking and became more obsessed and was driven to not just capturing Samuel but killing him.

After 20 years of tracking Uncle Rheem and his criminal organization around the world, Robert got a break. Samuel was found in a hotel room in a foreign country coked-out with dead mutilated underage boys in his room. He was arrested and they agreed to extradite him to America. Robert could finally exhale. He personally escorted Samuel to the supermax prison in a Lechter type screen. Samuel "Uncle" Rheem was convinced he had been set up by his own family members.

Rheem's family could breathe a sigh of relief, the devil within was gone and in a supermax prison.

Most family members were secretly ecstatic with Uncle Rheem' s capture. The family was worth billions however they spent enormous sums of money on the remaining secret. Originally family members worked for powerful white families in the United States. The women were very good at accounting and did off-book services for these families ever since they first fronted for carpetbaggers after the Civil War. White powerful families gave them protection and wealth. For the most part, they had been honest but clannish and secretive. Only Uncle Rheem's part of the family was pure evil and sinister, however, they were excellent protectors. They would do anything to anyone to achieve their goals.

The present:

The family was doing well better than it had ever done in the past. They were enjoying their money openly. Queen Mother, the matriarch of the family was said to be in her 80s but was still running the family businesses. She had always headed the legitimate side while Uncle Rheem headed the criminal side. Queen Mother was his older sister, beloved by everyone and was seen as a respected businesswoman. After 12 years of Sam in prison, the younger ones in Quen Mother's part of the family were unaware of their bad side. Queen Mother kept Rheem's part of the family under strict control.

Robert was still with the FBI working out of his office after 30+ years. He was still obsessed with Rheem but no one at the FBI would listen. They had their man and that was it for the FBI's senior management.

The start of the action:

One day all the family members received a text and that would change their lives again. Uncle Rheem was back. He sent out the code for a family meeting. He demanded that every family member in the world attend. Only Uncle Rheem"s part of the family rejoiced. Robert was informed that someone freed Sam Rheem. He flew into a rage.

When Uncle Rheem called you dare not show up. The family-owned a reconverted 1950's missile silo in Kansas (the one with horizontal liquid-fueled rockets). It had been reconstructed with an airport and underground hangers that cold house fleets of jets. It was a massive facility. There was also a private train track. The silo was rebuilt as an underground hotel with a hundred rooms and dining rooms. It also had an amphitheater for several hundred people. The security force was first class.

Upon getting the message from Uncle Rheem family members responded in different ways. Some cried, some prayed and some had nervous breakdowns. Others were clueless. One family member had married an NBA player who just got an enormous five-year contract. She spits up when she received the message, he thought she was pregnant. She had never told him about her family. He just believed they were super-wealthy.

Most family members arrived in their Lear Jets others driving in caravans. Adorable Janae was in love with her NBA husband Xion. He had no idea what was going on. Janae stayed on her cell phone communicating with other family members during the entire ride to the silo. Xion could feel some strange energy.

Queen Mother relaxed on her private train with her husband and security forces. She never flies and she never alerts people to when she is going to arrive. She is the powerful matriarch of the family. Well into her 80s she is frail but majestic.. She is the supreme power over the money and she is Uncle Rheems equal. Uncle Rheem loves, fears and respects his sister. However, he cannot wait until she dies and he can take over the family completely if there is no heir to her seat.

Robert and several other FBI agents are also outside the silo. He wants to prove that the family is still an ongoing worldwide criminal organization.

Family members gather like lions, playful but dangerous, looking for any weakness. Uncle Rheem and his clan have two missions: payback the family members who betrayed him and sent him to prison and to kill Queen Mother's heir. Uncle Rheem heard that Queen-Mother was ill and may not be able to make the trip. She is the only one that can stop his nefarious plan.

Janae leaves her husband to mingle with other family members. Sam converses with other new family members. The new members were surprised and perplexed over the wealth, security, diversity and the anxiety they were witnessing. Xion talks to another guy who is married to one of the family members, they were really getting along. The guy was drinking a lot and treated his wife in a demeaning way. Later Xion decided to take a walk even though his wife told him to stay close. He was looking for his new friend and he found him. He was in a room with other family members being beaten senselessly. They kept telling him as they beat him never touch a woman in this family again. Xion was shaken by the violence and now wondering what he had gotten himself into. He was not the only one wondering what was happening.

Queen Mother's heir apparent moved cautiously between family members and the various rooms. She knew she was being stalked by desperate killers even though her identity was not known. It was rumored that Uncle Rheem had killed his own daughter by mistake thinking she was the heir apparent to Queen Mother. Her life depended on her wit and Queen Mother arriving on time.

The Queen Mother's train steamed down the tracks towards the silo. Uncle Rheem was frantically searching for her heir apparent within the hundreds of family members. Robert and several other agents get closer and closer to the silo to take pictures and record the event that he hopes will give him the proof he needs. Various clans within the family plot to stop Uncle Rheem or to help or to take over. Other clans performed ancient chants. Yet other clans run interference for Queen mother's heir apparent. All this is happening while the heir apparent moves from room to room hallway to the hallway and is actually crawling through the vents trying to stay alive out of the clutches of a sociopathic killer uncle.

Uncle Rheem grew tired of chasing so he called the family to the amphitheater. They must obey. They gather in the Great hall. Uncle Rheem is on the stage. There appeared to be a light show going through the glass tubes that encircled the theater. Some stared at Uncle Rheem others stared at the colorful glass tubes circulating the room and yet others wept openly. The chanting clans never stopped.

Uncle Rheem received word that Queen Mother was on the way. He needed more time to dispose of her heir apparent. He dispatched some clan members to slow the train. He ordered the furnace deep in the catacombs of the silo to be activated.

There were two chairs on stage one for Uncle Rheem and one for Queen Mother. Uncle Rheem ordered the suspected traitors who helped the FBI to be placed front and center on their knees. Without giving them any chance to defend themselves from these charges Uncle Rheem had his clan escort them to the furnaces. They were to be cremated alive. Hearing some of this Robert calls in backup.

This was the family's way, at least on the Uncle Rheem side of the family. He needed to set an example to scare Queen Mother's heir apparent into surfacing. The doomed members walked into the furnace showing no tears or fear. This was their way of life and the only life they knew. The glass tubes took on a different color that was mesmerizing. Everyone except those who had never been here before knew that human remains from the furnace were flowing through those tubes.

Queen Mother's train was stopped apparently due to technical difficulties. However, it is really caused by Uncle Rheem's minions. There's a big altercation between the two security forces unbeknownst the Queen Mother. The train moves on picking up speed to make up for the lost time.

Finally, Uncle Rheem, desperate to find the heir apparent, has all the women come to the center of the auditorium. He demands that they all kneel and pay homage to him. There is confusion There is fear. Uncle Rheem suspects the Queen Mother's heir apparent would never kneel. Most of the women got on their knees but some did not. One young woman standing in the front row with all the dignity and power of five hundred years of life stared into Uncle Rheem's eyes with defiance. Others stood in defiance knowing that their lives we're going to end because Uncle Rheem was a killer like no other. Others stood because they were still clueless or independent, refusing to bow to a male.
Yes, he protected the clans but the price was that you lived in fear of a madman.

Uncle Rheem is so desperate he decides to order the ones standing, the ones who refused to bow to be escorted to the furnace to see if that would smoke Queen Mother's heir apparent out. As they were being led away not one older woman cried or showed fear but younger ones were panicking and/or in tears.

Other clans wish to help but none do because they fear what Uncle Rheem and his clan will do. They are the most vindictive brutal clan within the family. The Nigerian clan and the Columbian clan secretly negotiate but fail to stop the madness. Only Queen Mother can unite the clans.

Uncle Rheem was dealing with bloodlines that gave birth to all of mankind.

The women are lead to the secret room and dressed in white to prepare for the execution. Not one woman broke young or old. One of Uncle Rheem's sadistic sons was conducting the execution. Some think he's sicker than his father. As the women sat in their chairs in the crematorium furnace, upstairs in the auditorium it bordered on madness, fear, and sorrow, especially among those who were just being clued in.

Uncle Rheem's son gave the women one more chance to surrender the heir apparent. Not even a blink came back. He reached for the lever and started to pull it to him. Right at that point, his hand was cut off. Queen mother's Security Force had arrived in the nick of time.

The Queen Mother walked through the auditorium with all the grace, dignity and power of a goddess. All the family members jubilantly greeted her and parted the way.

Queen Mother walked onto the stage with her long beautiful gray braids and her trademark oval black sunglasses. It was like the ocean stood still. Uncle Rheem seemed petrified as he stood up to greet his older sister. They went into the chamber just the two of them. Uncle Rheem knew it was over, he would never gain complete control of the family. They both emerged from the room, Queen Mother sitting on her throne and her brother sat on his throne with a look of temporary defeat.

Just as Uncle Reem named his now handless son as his heir apparent bedlam broke out when it was announced that the FBI was on its way and would soon arrive. Both Uncle Rheem's group and Queen Mother's group head for the exits. Queen Mother to her train and Reem's group everywhere. Others did their best to make sense of it, especially the new members by marriage or youth who never ever thought they would be in an FBI raid.

During the escape several old scores are settled, several protect others from the madness, and while Quen Mother "successfully escapes" but her train is tracked and bugged on the way out - she is not arrested as she is considered a calming force in the clan. It is unknown if Uncle Rheem makes it out during the final firefight between the FBI and the various armed factions.

Uncle Rheem's survival is left to any sequel.